

This is my approved response to Supreme Court ruling:

Of course, it's disappointing, but it isn't over. There is much left to present. I hold on to the knowledge that the subsequent phases of appeal will provide a better opportunity to present all the strong issues that exist. I cling to the hope that some judges will be willing to study what happened and learn what has been ignored. Others are examining what transpired. Questions and doubts are being revealed. I believe the day will come when people will say this has been unfair; there is far too much uncertainty; there are too many mistakes; there needs to be a new trial.

Jerry Sandusky